

A photograph of Baby Gramps, a man with a long grey beard and a straw hat, playing a guitar. He is wearing a red patterned shirt. The background is dark.

BABY GRAMPS

“A national treasure, the final repository of an entire era of pop culture. Gramps draws from thousands of Paleozoic jazz, blues, hillbilly, and pop tunes. He is a genuine eccentric talent, an old-time songster and an incredible entertainer.”

Time Out New York

“Baby Gramps’ performances on “Rogue’s Gallery”, a two-disc set of sea chanteys produced by Hal Willner, are among the album’s best, and that’s saying a lot: among the other contributors are Sting, Lou Reed, Lucinda Williams, Bono, Bryan Ferry, Nick Cave, Van Dyke Parks and Bill Frisell.” The New York Times
